New year at Eagle Academy

Some important changes are coming up this school year at the Warm Springs k-8 Eagle Academy. There are new bus routes, new school hours, and new staff at the academy, entering its second year.

The start of the school day for grades k-8 will be 8:55 a.m., and the day will end at 3:40 p.m. Buses depart at 3:45 p.m. Athletics begin at 4 p.m.

While the school class day begins at 8:55 a.m.—one hour later than last year—student activities are available starting at 7:45 a.m. This is so parents with jobs can still drop their children off at school before going to work.

One of the main reasons for changing the start of the school day is to have a time to engage teachers, administrators and support staff in training, said Eagle Academy principal Ken Parshall.

The school is pursuing a program as set out in part by the organization AVID, Advancement Via Individual Advancement. The goal of the organization:

“Simply, AVID trains educators to use proven practices in order to prepare students for success in high school, college, and a career, especially students traditionally underrepresented in higher education.”

This will be the first year at the Warm Springs Academy for Principal Parshall, who has experience and success in school performance improvement.

He was principal at McNary and McKay high schools in the Salem-Keizer district. Later, he was Salem-Keizer assistant district superintendent, overseeing 63 schools. “He is a well-recognized turnaround principal in Oregon,” said district superintendent Rick Molitor.

McKay High School, for instance, is a turnaround school: Students there saw dramatic improvement—doubling reading and math skills—during Parshall’s tenure.

Diane Dominiak and Chris Wyland are the assistant principals at the school. Dominiak comes to Warm Springs from the Jefferson County Middle School, while Wyland is in his second year at the academy.

Bus routes, athletics

The district is changing bus routes this school year, by reducing the number of stops.

There will be neighborhood pick-up stops, instead of the door-to-door route. Fewer stops will mean less time on the bus.

Back to School BBQ

The Warm Springs Back to School Barbecue is this Thursday, September 3, at the Warm Springs Eagle Academy. Students can pick up backpacks, school supplies and class lists, and meet with teachers and staff.

The first day of school is next Wednesday, Sept. 9. At the high school for grades 10 through 12, the first day is September 10.

At the barbecue on Wednesday, the Johnson O'Malley Committee will have the 2015-16 enrollment and survey forms to be completed by k-12 students. For more information contact Deanie Smith, chairwoman of the Johnson O'Malley Committee, 541-553-3290.

Also at the barbecue, Warm Springs Prevention is hosting the Sacred Hoop, in recognition of National Recovery Month.

Tribes stand against Nestlé water plan

The Nestlé company and the city of Cascade Locks have been planning the commercial use and sale of Oxbow Springs water.

The Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs are against the idea, as another threat to tribal water, fisheries and other treaty rights. The treaty rights date back at least to 1855, earlier than any other.

Nestlé is proposing to build a water bottling plant at Cascade Locks. The idea would involve the removal of about 118 million gallons of water per year from the pristine Oxbow Springs, the water source for the Oxbow Fish Hatchery.

Tribal Council Chairman Austin Greene Jr. stated the tribes’ opposition earlier this year in a letter to Gov. Brown and other officials:

Courtesy Keep Nestle Out of the Gorge

“Water quantity and quality and hatchery operations are of paramount importance to ongoing treaty-based rights of the Tribe in the Columbia River area, and to ongoing federal litigation,” the letter says.

“These factors are not only reasonable to evaluate but of critical importance for the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife’s proposed water transfer, particularly in the context of climate change... and more frequent droughts and dry years.”

The city of Cascade Locks supposedly traded water rights from the Herman Creek aquifer with ODFW, in order to sell the Oxbow Springs water to Nestlé. This transaction happened after Chairman Greene sent his letter to the governor and others.

The Confederated Tribes are not alone in opposing the Nestlé-Cascade Locks proposal.

The group ‘Keep Nestlé Out of the Gorge’ is a coalition including the Sierra Club, Food and Water Watch, and Bark—Defending and Restoring Mount Hood. Several state lawmakers, and tens of thousands of citizens have voiced their opposition.

Budget talks starting

Tribal Council has a full agenda in September, with 2016 budget and enterprise presentations set to begin next week.

Enterprise updates begin on Tuesday, Sept. 8, with Ventures, the Telecom, Power and Water, Indian Head Casino, Credit, Composite Products, Kah-Nee-Ta, and Forest Products on the agenda.

The following day begins the 2016 budget presentations, with the secretary-treasurer, community assistance, Human Resources Branch, Finance, Tribal Court, Human Services, Public Safety and Natural Resources branches on the agenda.

Then on Thursday, presentations are scheduled for Public Utilities, Tribal Council and committees, debt service, A Place for Kids, capital projects, High Lookee Lodge, the Museum at Warm Springs, and administrative service management.

Friday, Sept. 11, time is available for Governmental Affairs, the Gaming Commission and surveillance, and callbacks. The 2016 budget review is scheduled for all day on Tuesday, Sept. 22.

Once the draft proposal is ready, Tribal Council will post it for member consideration, followed by the district and general council meetings.

Some other items on the September agenda for Tribal Council: a meeting with the Affiliated Tribes of Northwest Indians; and meetings with the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission, and the Gorge Commission.

Forest Products is scheduled to give its quarterly report to Council on Monday, Sept. 28.

Future leaders meet at Youth Council

The Warm Springs Youth Council is one of the inspiring stories to happen this year on the reservation.

The Youth Council started just a few months ago, inspired by the Generation Indigenous (Gen-I) Youth Challenge. Since then the Youth Council has already made some impressive accomplishments.

Most recently, the Youth Council met with Tribal Council, which gave the group its official support and endorsement. (Tribal Council Resolution 12,053, see page 6.)

The Tribal Council recognition is a step in the process toward the Youth Council becoming a 501(c)(3) non-profit corporation.

Over the past several weeks, the Youth Council has developed their Constitution and By-Laws, vision and mission statements, and a Code of Conduct. They held a two-day training seminar last week, with guest speakers and community support.

Dave McMechan/Spilyay

This summer they traveled to Washington, D.C., for the first White House Tribal Youth Gathering and National UNITY Conference. They met with federal lawmakers, and other Native youth leaders from across Indian Country.

The Warm Springs Youth Council has a Twitter account, and Facebook page, where you can learn more about the group.

They were the second Youth Council in the country to become affiliated with UNITY (United National Indian Tribal Youth). The Youth Council is open to local young people ages 14-24.

In August the Youth Council members held their first election, choosing the group officers. Co-presidents are Gavin Begay and Keeyana Yellowman. Mary Olney is vice-president.

The Youth Council treasurer is Malia Collins, the secretary is Ashley Meanus, and the communications manager is Raymond Sam Smith.

BBQ: Prevention bringing Sacred Hoop to community

The Hoop was built in a sweat lodge in May of 1995. A multi-cultural Elders gathering was held in Janesville, Wisc., to provide prayers for the Hoop, and align its purpose to the coming healing time. The Elders placed the four gifts of Healing, Hope, Unity and Power to Forgive the Unforgivable into the Hoop.

The Mission of the Sacred

Hoop: Healing individuals, families, communities and nations. When the Sacred Hoop comes to a community, the people gather for ceremonies and talks about living a sober and healthy life that is balanced emotionally, mentally, physically and spiritually.

Great summer for Native Aspirations

by Reina Estimo
Aspirations coordinator

Native Aspirations' Soaring for the Future summer youth work program employed 112 total youth over the course of this summer.

One hundred and five of the youth completed the 8-week work experience program. These youth worked in 40 different departments.

Out of the 112, five were current college students. The remaining 107 were high school students.

The funding for program was secured by Caroline Cruz, tribal health liaison, in the sum of $250,000, which came from the tribes and IHS Joint Health Commission.

In order for work sites to get summer youth workers, they had to undergo a mandatory employer's orientation, conducted by Human Resources director Elizabeth Sato.

To hire summer youth, each department had to provide one adult mentor/primary supervisor for every three youth workers. I was in charge of managing the program. The primary supervisors and mentors provided the program with direct supervision.

First- and second-year youth started the program by completing a series of work readiness classes.

The classes started after school was out in May and June. Most youth workers begin working June 29, and most finished on August 21. All Native Aspirations youth were done with the program by August 28.

While in the program, the youth workers got valuable on-the-job work experience in a number of different fields, and were offered a number of different trainings and workshops dealing with health and leadership.

Some youth even completed an emergency preparedness certification, or got First Aid or CPR training.

The program ended with an awards ceremony at Kah-Nee-Ta, for which Kah-Nee-Ta generously donated swimming and miniature golf passes.

Those who completed the program were awarded completion certificates, among other individual awards. There were 26 Perfect Attendance awards in the program, awarded to those individuals who did not miss any full or even part days of work throughout the eight weeks.

Other contest winners and categories: Employee of the Year, Hunter Onstad. Employee of the Year runner-ups: Ashton Bruised Head and Merrick Patt. Resume Contest: Mary Olney. Art Contest Grand Prize Winner: Amanda Henderson. Art Contest crayon contest winner: Unique Bryant.

Oxbow Springs: many in opposition

Last month, Anna Mae Leonard who lives at Cascade Locks, went on a five-day hunger strike in protest.

This drew attention from various media sources statewide. Tribal fishermen and others joined Anna Mae in a demonstration of opposition.

Last week at Tribal Council, governmental affairs director Louie Pitt updated the Council on the situation.

Councilman Carlos Smith said there are reports that the Confederated Tribes did not oppose the transfer of water between Cascade Locks and the ODFW, while the Council Chairman's letter shows otherwise. How this happened should be clarified and corrected, he said.

Leadership

Warm Springs tribal leaders and people:

Tribal leadership should never be divided by generational beliefs. Instead, they should be united with a common history, love, and commitment to our peoples. To acknowledge our tribal responsibility to honor our Covenant with our beloved Creator and the laws He requires of our people.

So with this vision, let us remember that our actions as individuals can have multi-generational impacts for our whole membership. Our Creator has reminded us, our history, both good and bad, will guide us.

In accordance to our tribal teaching, we have a crucial obligation to correct our people too. Discipline is a strong part of tribal life. We cannot turn away from correcting those who bring dishonor to our Tribe and our core beliefs.

Our goal should reflect hope and the belief of improved tribal government that has regained the trust of our tribal people. Hope and belief that growth is possible with correct modifications and adjustments that guide us back to our intended path as seen by our elders long gone—for the sake of our future generations.

Our mission should be to restore our core beliefs that the welfare and interest of all our people will be in every decision this leadership makes and every leadership thereafter.

A quote of our beloved Was-qu' Treaty Chief Tohsimpt, "Who am I to be so important than the common man—without my people I am nothing." Chief Tohsimpt refused to sign our 1855 Treaty first—ahead of other tribal men due to our tribal belief that we are all equal in our Creators eyes although our traditional responsibility to the people varied we were still equal. Leader, food gather, hunter, medicine person, undertaker, drum handler, regalia maker—no responsibility is more important than any other.

In our teaching, our belief is to follow divine guidance, to speak out to correct wrongness and to guide us back to the correct path. This is an inherited traditional responsibility that was handed to me upon the deaths of my mom and my dad. I am the great, great, great-granddaughter of Was-qu' Treaty Chief Tohsimpt and daughter of Chief Pax-a-wana-shut, head Chief of the middle Columbia River. My husband is the great-grandson of Tulalip Treaty Chief Kanum. Our Creator handed down this duty through family generations, so until my death, I will speak and I will always stand by my words. When I am gone, my sons and grandsons will carry this duty.

My words may hurt feelings or anger people, but most people know, I say words based on our teaching. Even when I stand alone, pitiful, with no support, I will speak as guided by our Creator. And for the sake of our future generations—Beware of who you nominate and vote for Tribal Council.

We have nobody to blame but ourselves for the mess we are in. Make sure they know our way of life, they have an Indian name, have had their ceremonies and that they are alcohol, drug and violence free.

I am thankful for our Chairman, our Chairwoman and our Chiefs, sincerely,
Leona A. Ike-Smith

We had about a half dozen youth, tribal members ages 12 to 13, attend the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission Salmon Camp this summer.

A couple of weeks ago the girls gave a public report utilizing a story board.

They each received $100 honoraria from CRITFC. The theme of the week-long camp was the journey of salmon, higher education, and culture and tradition. Our kids did a great job.

Credit scores—the good, the bad and the ugly

Super Prime	781 – 850

Lenders use them to calculate their risk in giving credit. Their assessment of risk when lending to us determines the interest rate we will be offered and if credit will be granted.

What's a good score? Here are the rankings from Experian:

Prime will get good interest rates; Super Prime gets the best rates. The others quickly become hurtful or cause for rejection of an application.

The Good—Short of cash? We get to buy now and pay later. Think of credit as a tool. Maintain it well and it will work for us.

The Bad—Carrying a balance from month to month over 30 percent of our limit reduces our scores. Paying late reduces it more. Our scores will be lowered for how late we pay and how many times we pay late.

The Ugly—Collections, "negotiated payoffs," and bankruptcy will kill a credit score.

Check out Cooking Matters at Extension

The High Desert Food and Farm Alliance is partnering with the Warm Springs Oregon State University Extension Office to bring Cooking Matters. This will be a six-week long cooking course for adults.

Cooking Matters will start Thursday, Sept. 17, and continue on Thursdays from 5:30-7:30 p.m. in the Extension demonstration kitchen. The class goes through October 22.

The course builds on kitchen skills, including knife handling, food safety and sanitation, while also incorporating nutrition and cooking on a budget.

Participants in the course will go home each week with the raw ingredients from the meal they cooked. You can then practice at home and cook for your families. Each week that is one free bag of food. Upon completion of the six-week course, participants also receive a free cookbook and a cutting board.

"It made me more adventurous in my cooking," a participant from a previous class, held in Bend, was saying recently. "I'm better at adding veggies to things, and trying new foods."

Cooking Matters is a completely free program designed to assist participants in improving their cooking skills: Anyone 18 and over can sign up at the OSU Extension Office building in Warm Springs, at the Education building.

Or call me at the High Desert Food and Farm Alliance, 541-963-8310. Email: jane@hdfha.org

If you sign up, please plan to attend each class in the six-week course. Registration is set to close on Tuesday, Sept. 8. We are also looking for one volunteer to help assist the head chef during the course.

Jane Sabin-Davis, High Desert Food and Farm Alliance program administrator.

The Madras High School Class of 1965 will have their 50 Year Reunion on Friday, September 11. The class will have a no-host gathering at Charlie's Pizza at 4 p.m. And on September 12, the reunion will be at the Elks Lodge, beginning at 4 p.m.

She studied and graduated with a Farm Business Management degree from Idaho State University, 1995-1998. Karen worked for the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes for 25 plus years, starting with the WIC program, Head Start and Land Use Department, Agricultural Resource Management program, and retired in 1998.

Karen was an athlete, and enjoyed playing competitive softball with the known as the Sultans, who won several tournaments in the 1970s and '80s. She played volleyball and tennis, and she loved to run.

Karen enjoyed outdoor camping, hunting and fishing with her family, and beadwork. She enjoyed traveling with her family, and was very supportive of her husband throughout his service on the Fort Hall Business Council. Through her work and sports, Karen had many lifetime friendships, and will be greatly missed.

Karen met Nathan Small in 1976, which was the beginning of their 39 years together. They had three children, Sheldon Lee (Alice) Small, Daloa Dawn (Aaron) Pebeahsy and Nathaniel Uphawk Small, and for their brief time raised Donovan Lee Osborne. Karen was very involved in raising her grandchildren, Aaron Wayne Pebeahsy Jr., Mary Loa Dawn Small, Jalen Troy Pebeahsy,

Salmon struggling in a changing climate

by Laura Gephart
CRITFC Climate Change Lead

For years, tribal members have been on the front lines of seeing the effects of climate change in the harvest of the First Foods.

From earlier ripening times to odd game behavior, they've seen the ancient patterns disrupted more and more. Salmon and other fish are affected by these changes as well.

As the region warms, winter snow instead falls as rain, and what snow does fall melts earlier.

This results in the water traveling through the system during the winter, leaving much less during the hot summer months.

The increased winter flows scour the riverbeds, disturb nests, and cause physical damage to both salmon eggs and juveniles, while the lower summer flows increase water temperatures further, reducing the overall habitat available to salmon.

This year, the Columbia River basin has experienced a winter of extremely low snowfall levels and a summer of high air temperatures, warming up the rivers.

The snowmelt came off earlier than normal, resulting in extreme low flows in the mainstem and tributaries.

While the 2015 Columbia River runoff volume is not historically low, the problem for fish is the combination of low flows and high water temperatures.

The water temperature above Bonneville Dam, for example, has averaged 73 degrees in recent weeks—9 degrees warmer than the average for the same time period over the last five years. For salmon, that's literally the difference between life and death.

Warm water and salmon

While the early high flows help adult fish returning in the spring, the summer combination of low flows and high water temperatures create a stressful environment for migrating adults and juveniles.

Often adult salmon will avoid warm freshwater, using precious energy reserves to swim around warm water areas. Or they hold in cooler water refuges, such as tributaries or spring-fed lake areas, waiting for the temperature in the mainstem to cool down.

This can delay or even prevent spawning. Higher water temperature can also speed up juvenile salmon development. This can result in smolts reaching the ocean before their food source, forcing them to survive on less or starve.

Bacteria that can infect salmon such as ichthyophthirius multifiliis (ich) and columnaris (gill rot) thrive in warm water.

These diseases spread more quickly when the rivers are crowded by low flows, and can lead to increased pre-spawn deaths. A recent USGS video showed severely infected sockeye salmon taking refuge in the cooler water of Drano Lake.

System out of balance

Warm ocean temperatures favor fish like sardines and albacore tuna, but salmon and steelhead rely on coldwater nutrients.

If the warm temperatures continue or expands, Pacific Northwest salmon and steelhead could suffer in coming years. This has happened to marine mammals, sea birds, and Pacific salmon in the past.

Juvenile salmon and steelhead migrating from the Columbia River to the ocean this year and next may experience poor survival.

The salmon region of the North Pacific Ocean has never been so warm for so long in recorded history. The expanse of warm water has sea surface temperatures as much as 5.4 Fahrenheit higher than average. This has lasted for months, in an area hundreds of miles across.

The situation does not match recognized patterns in ocean conditions such as El Niño or La Niña, which both affect marine food webs.

the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's National Weather Service estimates a 65 percent chance that a severe El Niño will occur this fall or early winter. This means higher temperatures and lower precipitation for the Columbia River basin.

With more precipitation falling last winter as rain, drought conditions during the spring, and unusually high summer temperatures, by July the Wallowa Mountains this year were snow-free.

Planning for change

Although this past winter and summer might be just a rare event, it could be preview of the new normal predicted by climate models.

The Columbia River tribes have been working on planning for a changing climate, including climate change research, advocating for river operations modifications, calling for fish passage above Grand Coulee and Chief Joseph Dams, and completing habitat projects designed to help cool down tributaries.

Addressing climate change impacts is also one of the recommendations in the tribes' salmon restoration plan, Wy-Kan-Ush-Mi Wa-Kish-Wit.

These efforts, however, won't stop a warmer climate. To even begin to do that that will require dedicated international cooperation. Knowing this, the tribes have been advocating for the U.S. to address this issue on a national and international scale.

Everything is connected

One of the most precious traditional teachings the tribes hold is the concept that "everything is connected."

For thousands of years, the tribes used this teaching to live in an appropriate and sustainable way on the earth. To properly address this threat, the world must be willing to listen and incorporate this traditional Native wisdom into their activities and actions, not only for themselves and future generations, but for the very planet itself.

CRITFC featured at Fisheries Society conference

Indian Country was front and center at the national conference of the American Fisheries Society, held in Portland last month.

Staff from the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission and its member tribes were featured throughout the four-day event.

CRITFC and tribal staff gave over 27 presentations, displayed seven research posters, and screened two documentaries. CRITFC was an integral part of the conference's development and operations.

Yakama Nation tribal leader Gerald Lewis provided the conference's invocation.

CRITFC executive director Paul Lumley gave the plenary session welcome address to the more than 3,500 fishery professionals from all over the world.

Staff presentations highlighted the diversity of their work in genetics, harvest management, cutting-edge fisheries research, sturgeon and lamprey biology, and climate change, among other topics.

CRITFC, along with several other Columbia River basin tribes and First Nations, received the American Fisheries Society's 2015 William E. Ricker Resource Conservation Award.

This award acknowledges singular accomplishments or long-term contributions that advance aquatic resource conservation at a national or international level.

The AFS Past Presidents Advisory Council recognized tribal leadership and their work in creating a common vision for restoring ecosystem function and resiliency to the Columbia River Watershed.

During his plenary speech, Lumley called upon scientists to address climate change, stating:

"When the tribes signed the treaties of 1855 we didn't anticipate climate change. But climate change is here. The warming waters and dying fish are an urgent matter and we need your help."

The American Fisheries Society is the world's oldest and largest organization dedicated to strengthening the fisheries profession, advancing fisheries science, and conserving fisheries resources.

The August conference was the 145th national conference for the organization.

The Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission is advertising the following two full-time positions:

Full-Time Lamprey Biologist. This position is part of CRITFC's Fishery Science department, and is located in Portland, Oregon. Primary responsibilities of the lamprey biologist position are to facilitate and expand genetics-based analyses, to supplement ongoing monitoring of interior Columbia Basin Pacific Lamprey populations conducted by the four CRITFC member tribes, and to evaluate the success of tribal lamprey translocation and hatchery supplementation projects in areas where populations have been extirpated. A Master's degree in biological sciences or related field is required; or a Bachelor's degree in the biological sciences or related field is required plus a minimum of three years of relevant work experience. The job announcement closes on October 9, 2015. For a full job description visit our website at: <http://www.critfc.org/critfc-employment-opportunities/>

Oregon zoo honoring vultures in Sept.

As part of nature's cleanup crew, vultures are famous for arriving "late to the feast." They drop onto a carcass for choice leftovers once the predators that dispatched the animal have vacated the scene.

It's only fitting then that festivities marking International Vulture Awareness Day will be a couple weeks late this year at the Oregon Zoo.

The official awareness day falls on the first Saturday in September, but the zoo's vulture celebration takes place Sept. 18-19 this year.

On both days, the zoo will showcase California condors, turkey vultures and other "master recyclers," highlighting the critical role vultures play in ecosystems around the world.

At 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., visitors can stop by the zoo's Condors of the Columbia habitat for keeper talks and up-close views of these colorful, charismatic and critically endangered birds.

Though native to the region, and commonly seen here during the time of Lewis and Clark, California condors haven't soared through Northwest skies for more than a century.

Volunteers will be on hand throughout the day, providing information about these enormous birds and the actions we can take to protect them. For more information, visit: oregonzoo.org/Condors.

At 1 p.m. during the celebration days, another kind of vulture will make a cameo appearance at the zoo's Family Farm: Clyde, a turkey vulture from the zoo's popular Wildlife Live program presented by Portland General Electric.

Despite her name, Clyde is a female. Hatched in 1985, she was taken from the wild and hand-raised by a man who thought her nest had been abandoned. (It is against the law to raise native birds without a permit.)

When Clyde was released back into the wild, it became clear she had become too habituated to humans: she begged for food, chased dogs, followed children and poked holes in screen doors. She was taken to the Audubon Society of Portland and then brought to the zoo.

From 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., guests can take part in vulture games and activities on the concert lawn.

Considered nature's cleanup crew, vultures play a vital role in their environment, feeding on carrion—dead animals—that could otherwise spread disease. Unfortunately, vulture populations have been in sharp decline worldwide.

Committed to conservation, the zoo is currently working to save endangered California condors, Oregon silverspot and Taylor's checkerspot butterflies, western pond turtles and Oregon spotted frogs.

W.S. women carry on family firefighting tradition

by Erin Rook
The Source Weekly

Yvette Leecy walks through the fire camp like it's her home—and in many ways, it is. She stops to greet the crew serving meals to firefighters, grabbing a sack lunch and asking how long they've been working fires. Some are relatives, others are coworkers, none are strangers.

It's this knack for working with people—combined with a fierce determination and indefatigable spirit—that has helped the Warm Springs native fight an addiction to meth and alcohol, and to become a sought-after wildland firefighter and timber sales officer. Where meth once coursed through her veins, fire now lives.

After coming home from nearly two years of treatment for drug and alcohol abuse, Yvette felt hopeless. How would she get back on her feet without a driver's license or a job? Her brothers—who worked on the hot shot and engine crews—suggested she give firefighting a try. It wasn't long before she was hooked.

"It's a spiritual and emotional state for me," Yvette says. "I actually want to be a part of teaching the tribe with my daughters that treating the ground is important because then it brings back our healthful berries; it brings back our vegetation."

Once she'd been out of treatment for three years, she tried to regain custody of her children—two daughters and a son—who'd been in the care of family since she went into treatment. But the judge told her she would have to choose between the new career that gave her a sense of purpose and accomplishment, and the three children she loved and missed.

"I was approached by courts to step down from fire management, take my kids full time, or leave them in my mom's care," Yvette recalls. "When you fight fire, you can't be distracted, your focus needs to be 100 percent on that, or 100 percent on being a parent. The court didn't think I could do both."

If she had been a single father, Yvette notes, the outcome would have likely been different. Still, she transferred to a job in forestry, where she could at least continue to work with the forest, and focused on continuing her education and raising her children.

"It was very emotional," she says. "My passion for firefighting grew inside me. I felt like this was my purpose—to fight for Mother Earth."

Now that her children are grown, Yvette has been able to fight the occasional fire while continuing to work in forestry and on completing her degree. Most recently, she was part of the initial attack on the County Line 2 Fire, and only took a break to spend time with her daughter Karlen, a 23-year-old student at the University of Idaho who is studying forestry and fire ecology—and, not coincidentally, spent the summer fighting fires in Arizona, but had a rare week of downtime before returning to her senior year.

Yes, that's right: Yvette is not the only female firefighter in the family. Both of her daughters, Karlen and Yolanda Yallup, are following in their mother's footsteps. Yolanda is currently fighting the complex of fires in the Spokane area that recently claimed the lives of three firefighters. The single mother is also studying forestry at Central Oregon Community College between fires. (To read this article in its entirety, go to bendsource.com)

Rising to excellence in the W.S. community

It is hard to believe that it has been a whole year since I was called by Creator to serve the amazing people and community of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs.

I am inspired by the example of the Paiute, Wasco and Warm Springs people who are uniquely different from one another but share the common purpose of cohabitating and flourishing as a healthy vibrant community for the greater good of all.

I am impressed with the compassion and tenacity of the Warm Springs community as well as the persistent inquiry and desire of her people to become actively involved in the future well-being of all.

As I prayerfully reflect upon a twelve month journey that has impacted my heart-soul and spirit like no other experience in my life, I am grateful to those who welcomed me with open arms and waited to get to know me before making assumptions about who I was or why I came.

While it is true I did not grow up in Warm Springs, I have felt in many ways that Creator intended a mutual blessings by revealing the beautiful landscape and amazing people who call this home.

I am deeply indebted to the Pitts: Charlotte, Lillian and Louie as well as Elizabeth Woody and Joie Pitt who will always be my sisters.

I care deeply about the department I have been entrusted and believe beyond the shadow of any doubt in the Human Resources staff, Lois Lesarley, Kaitlyn Minnick, Nancy Mendez Lopez, Amelia Tewece, Denise Clements, Frank Brunoe, Greta White Elk, Carroll Dick, Melinda Poitra, and Reina Estimo and Amanda Henderson, who worked with us in the summer for Native Aspirations. They are a very special and unique blend of community leaders devoted to best practices and striving towards excellence in customer service.

It has been 365 days of very hard work, long hours sorting, organizing and sometimes completely changing processes to improve the services we offer to 800 of our tribal employees and to the nearly 700 enterprise employees.

Employees and community members depend upon us to direct them with their retirement, medical, insurance and benefits needs. It has been an busy year engaging with stakeholders like EDCO, COCC, WorkSource, State of Oregon and the many programs in Jefferson and Deschutes counties who want to be more actively engaged with the community of Warm Springs.

This journey required complete focus to an important responsibility coupled with some heartache when my intent was questioned—sometimes challenged as a perceived outsider.

In hindsight, I now understand the tests—after all not everyone knows me like the many colleagues I have worked with in my 40 year-career serving the private, nonprofit, public and tribal sector.

The truth is—there have been way too many broken promises endured by indigenous communities, way too many well-intentioned "visitors" who have come and gone without much helpful impact.

There have also been some folks who came to Warm Springs merely make a buck off of our communities, and that will not happen on my watch.

My first role was to ensure that no entity, no outside stakeholder was here to take advantage whether it was healthcare brokers, insurance peddlers, service providers or collaborative government agencies.

I was also charged with the oversight of Workforce investment (critical to addressing employment barriers) and Higher Education (educational opportunities for young people—my heart).

I feel like we at HR have done a good job working together on many initiatives: the Career Fair, Job Fair, Open Enrollment sessions, Provider Fair, new Employment resource center, Native Aspirations Summer Youth Program, the WSVR/WIA Academy, training departments on policies and procedures and simple things like training for safe motor vehicle operations for those who drive tribal vehicles—it's all important stuff—all critical to the overall well-being of our community.

All these routine accomplishments and more were expected on top of impromptu audits, political changes, policy changes and improving from better to best practices. We have done a great deal together and there is still plenty to do.

The most satisfying and rewarding aspect of my role as Human Resources Director has been my staff.

I am grateful to work together with each and every one of them including Raylene Thomas who has gone on to exciting educational opportunities—we are all delighted for her vision and her success.

My HR staff has been like family away from family and colleagues like Susan Brunoe, Arlissa White, Margie Tuckta, Judy Johnson, Todd Stum, Tammy Wilson, Alfred Estimo and Dennis Johnson who we engage with daily, and so many others too numerous to name have been a huge support to our HR Team.

I am also grateful to the many tribal leaders and our tribal elders who have not only challenged me to be the best I could be but also showed up at critical times to support our young people, our elders and our employees at important events and important transitions—thank you all.

I am honored to serve the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs government departments and her tribal enterprises and projects where we interface on a daily basis with equally enthusiastic HR/Comp and Benefits staff.

We at HR have come a long way in one year—and I credit all of it to an amazing staff who all stepped up and given the CTWS their very best.

Yes—we have much to accomplish as we move forward toward developing useful training programs, expanding employment resources, collaborating with local community stakeholders to ensure that tribal members and tribal community members have access to viable employment, setting up comprehensive mentoring and succession planning, ensuring the best possible benefits are accessed by our community, researching and ensuring fair wage scales and updated position grading and most importantly (to me) access to reasonable healthcare for all of our community members, while being treated in a respectful and honoring manner.

A healthy community can flourish and excel in so many ways. My grandmother Ruby Garnet Kent used to say, "Sweetheart, tomorrow is promised to no one."

I have no idea what tomorrow will bring but I know after reflecting upon the many photos that exemplify a year filled with meaningful work—I will try with all of my heart to give my very best to the people of Warm Springs until Creator calls me to my next life service.

Thank you to all who have believed in me, prayed for me, prayed for my staff, supported my staff, gave of your time and energy. You are deeply appreciated.

Rising to excellence—always,

Elizabeth Asahi Rising Sun Sato, tribal Human Resources director.

A message from Rick Molitor

Dear JCSD 509-J Families and Friends,

Welcome back to a new school year! It's an exciting time for us with five new administrators joining the JCSD 509J leadership team, bringing years of experience and a lot of enthusiasm for making our District the best place for kids. The Strategic Plan that many of you helped us create is still guiding our work as we focus on providing students with the skills and characteristics they need to be successful in school and life. Our Jefferson County ESD is also gearing up for another year of providing special needs and technology services to the four districts of Jefferson County.

This year, we will stay focused on what each student needs for success. At Madras High School, we'll continue to make proficiency-based teaching and learning and standards-based grading the heart of our work. What's different this year is our focus on expanding this model to all students from kindergarten through grade 12. I'm confident that our staff expertise, with your support, will help us move closer to the vision outlined in our Strategic Plan.

We also have a few important changes that you will need to know about. First, we're moving to a new school schedule with no late starts or early release days. The new schedule will convert a few school days to provide focused professional development time for our team. The second major change will be a centralized bus system. We know this is a big shift for families who have had door-to-door bus service for many years. We hope to support you through this transition as we work to reduce the amount of time our students are spending on the bus – including early pick-ups and late drop-offs. The good news is that we have community partners like Kids Club and Madras Aquatics Center to provide you with safe and healthy before and after school activities.

Thank you for your continued support of education in Jefferson County. I look forward to seeing and hearing from you throughout the year. Please don't hesitate to contact me if you have questions or comments. I can be reached at (541) 475-6192 or rmolitor@509j.net.

See you soon,
Rick Molitor
JCSD Superintendent

Seeking before or after school options for kids?

Has your bus route changed?

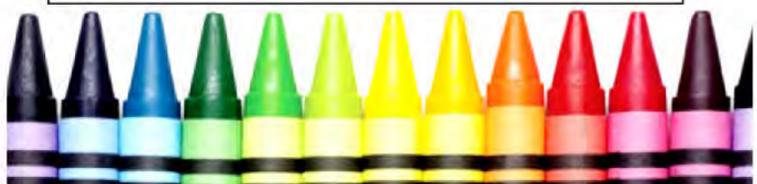

There have been significant changes to bus routes this Fall. Our Transportation Department has sought ways to decrease the time students are riding the bus, and have reduced the number of bus stops to this end. Group stops are now posted as well. You'll want to go to our website to check them out:

www.jcsd.k12.or.us/parents and select "Bus Route Change Information" for more information.

Exhibits feature Edward Curtis photos

Edward Curtis photographs of Native Americans will be on display in Bend at A6 studio.

The High Desert Museum meanwhile will display its 20 bound volumes of Curtis photos.

The A6 studio, in the old mill district, will open Edward Curtis: Shadow Catcher, this Friday, September 4. The High Desert collection, From the Vault: Edward S. Curtis's The Native American Indian, will open the same day.

Both exhibits run through October 31. Regarding the Curtis works at the A6 studio:

This major exhibit presents 50-plus original vintage photography prints by Edward Curtis, one of the most ambitious artists of the last century.

A famous Seattle photographer, Curtis spent 30 years seeking out, photographing, and documenting Native tribes across the American West, British Columbia and Alaska.

His magnum opus, the 20-

volume suite The North American Indian, remains one of the most thorough accounts of native tribes and their culture.

Discover Curtis' photographic methods and the mostly-forgotten photographic process used to etch photographic images into copper plates for printing.

Wooden box cameras, similar to ones used by Curtis, are on display at A6 courtesy of the High Desert Museum.

Regarding the High Desert Museum project:

The museum holds in its collection a complete set of the 20 bound volumes from Edward S. Curtis's renowned publication, The North American Indian. These rare volumes will be displayed, along with prints that depict tribes from the High Desert region. This is the inaugural exhibition for the new series, From the Vault, where the Museum unveils rarely-displayed materials from its collection.

For information on the High Desert Museum call 541-382-4754; or go to: highdesertmuseum.org
